Phil,
It has been a while since we talked. Since we last talked I have joined the Administration and am back working on the issues we have both worked on for years. Also [Ex. 6] at your alma mater of the University of Richmond.

Could I ask a personal favor. There is a young man that you may remember from [Ex. 6] that I have great respect for named [Ex. 6]. He is about to graduate from the University of Michigan with a Master's Degree in Naval Architecture. I have known [Ex. 6] since he was a young man and had the privilege of working with him as he worked his way through [Ex. 6]. Then again to watch his incredible development from a talented high [Ex. 6] to a very accomplished Naval Architect at the University of Michigan as both an undergrad and now as a graduate student.

[Ex. 6] about to graduate and could use some solid career counseling advice on what opportunities might exist for someone with his background at Exxon/Mobil or Sea River. I can think of nobody better placed to provide him the counsel he needs to begin his career.

Could you take a few minutes and talk with him. I would consider it a personal favor.

Subject: Carper to force White House to renominate White in 2018

By Anthony Adragna

12/19/2017 04:50 PM EDT

Sen. Tom Carper, top Democrat on the Environment and Public Works Committee, said today that he will force the Trump administration to renominate Kathleen Hartnett White to run the White House Council on Environmental Quality in 2018.

"Unqualified or controversial nominees will not simply be rubber-stamped by the Senate," Carper said in a statement. "Let's start the new year off with a clean slate and allow President Trump the opportunity to nominate a leader for the Council on Environmental Quality who takes environmental laws and public health protections seriously."

Senators typically allow nominees not confirmed by the end of the first year of a congressional term to remain pending without forcing them to be renominated. But Carper said White's controversial views on climate change and other environmental matters means she shouldn't be afforded that courtesy.

That comes as the first Republican senator expressed unease with White's nomination. Sen. Susan Collins told POLITICO she had viewed a clip of her confirmation hearing that "raised a lot of issues in my mind" but said she's not examined her record in-depth.

WHAT'S NEXT: Carper said he plans to object to any unanimous consent motions that would keep White's nomination pending after Congress adjourns for the year. That would force the White House to resubmit the nomination in 2018.

Subject: EPA deputy nominee Wheeler represented ethanol group

By Alex Guillén

10/18/2017 03:47 PM EDT

Andrew Wheeler, the nominee for EPA deputy administrator, worked for the ethanol group Growth Energy this year, according to his financial disclosure documents.

Wheeler, an attorney at Faegre Baker Daniels, was previously known to lobby for coal producer Murray Energy, among several other companies, as revealed in lobbying disclosures. But his financial disclosure shows Wheeler provided "strategic advice and counseling" rather than lobbying services to Growth Energy.

Growth Energy hired FBD for lobbying earlier this year, according to records, but Wheeler was never named on those disclosures.

"We hired Faegre Baker Daniels for lobbying and consultant help on renewable fuels issues. Andrew Wheeler has not lobbied on our behalf but has provided consultant services," Growth Energy spokeswoman Jenni Roberson said in an email. Wheeler did not return a request for comment today.

Growth Energy was one of the groups that successfully sued EPA over its 2014-2016 Renewable Fuel Standard volumes. It has also opposed EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt's recent move to potentially weaken biodiesel requirements, a proposal that has angered several key corn state Republican senators and threatened to hold up several other EPA nominees.

The financial disclosure shows Wheeler also provided advice and counsel, but not lobbying work, to International Paper, Archer Daniels Midland and General Mills. Previously reported lobbying clients included Xcel Energy, Bear Head LNG and Energy Fuels Resources.

WHAT'S NEXT: Wheeler was nominated earlier this month and has yet to have a nomination hearing in the Senate.

Really well. I think they like when you tell stories about your time at the agency. And just keep asking questions! It shows an interest in all the work that they do.

Subject: Quick Note on Air Liquide Meeting

Air Liquide is a long-time client of the firm, and we do a lot of work for them in a lot of areas, including environmental. I will say that they are committed to doing things the right way and have worked cooperatively with OTAQ staff for quite a while on the issue they want to raise with you. I don't want you to think that they are just walzing in and asking you to solve their problem.

As they will explain, because of the RFS program, they are developing number of landfill gas capture projects that only make sense financially because of the value of the RINs they can generate. They already have approved pathways for a couple of projects where they capture and refine the gas to pipeline quality and then have contracts to ensure that this amount of gas is used downstream for LNG or CNG transportation fuel. They are now developing a very similar project that involving capturing and refining the gas and then using it as a feedstock to produce hydrogen. They have contracts in place to ensure that this hydrogen is used in California as transportation fuel.

For some reason, however, they have not been able to get this pathway approved. They have provided everything that OTAQ has requested, and OTAQ has not raised any issues about their petition. I told them that they might just be caught up in the politics of the RFS program.

Anyway, this is a big issue for Air Liquide, as evidenced by the fact that Mike Graff is going in to meet with you. He's the CEO of Air Liquide North America and the number 2 guy in the international parent company. I think the GC, Kevin Feeney, may also be attending the meeting. They're both very solid guys.

I would liked to have joined the meeting, but the only time that worked for Mike was when I was going to be in Utah. That said, you'll be in good hands with my colleagues Dee Martin and Anna Burhop. They are terrific, and I think you'll enjoy meeting them.

If you have any questions after the meeting, please let me know, and I will make sure we get you the answers.

Thanks for taking the time to meet with them.

Bill,

As your OTAG team may have conveyed, the compressed input and model files were caught by agency firewalls, but by breaking the materials up we believe the files squeaked through the EPA email system this evening.

Please do let us know if you hear that they were not received.

All the best,
